

.MAX MONDAYS: OCTOBER 21, 2024

MAX Mondays provides a central place to stay abreast of the many workforce happenings in our region and state. Special thanks to everyone for your submittals and efforts to keep our workforce development community informed!

MAX Annual Meeting to Bring Our Members Together as We Celebrate 10 Years of Thankful Service in the Atlanta Region: Our MAX Annual Meeting is our signature event for bringing our members together. This year, we also commemorate our 10th anniversary of the workforce development we know as MAX. Since 2014, MAX has worked to strengthen connections, collaborations, and practices among workforce developers and organizations engaged in workforce development. Our MAX Annual Meeting will take place on Tuesday, December 10th, 11:30 AM to 1:30 PM, at the Metro Atlanta Chamber. We look forward to rejoicing in our anniversary with our beloved MAX members! REMINDER: MAX Minutes with Steven Ferguson, Georgia AIM, to Focus on Artificial Intelligence (AI) in Manufacturing: Artificial intelligence (AI) is a rapidly expanding technology in the manufacturing industry, with more than 80% of manufacturers already investing in AI or considering investing soon. AI infusion into manufacturing makes manufacturing more efficient while generating thousands of high paying AI manufacturing jobs. Created to leverage innovative ideas and programs in AI, Georgia AIM strives to propel Georgia manufacturing into the future. Steven Ferguson, Managing Director of Georgia AIM, will join MAX on Friday, October 25th to discuss how Georgia AIM is providing the tools and knowledge to empower all communities to fully participate in a diverse AI manufacturing workforce. Click here to learn more and register.

REMINDER: MAX Academy to Explore the Use of Artificial Intelligence (AI) in the Workforce Development Field: From our smart phones and smart cars to our smart homes and smart workplaces, artificial intelligence (AI) is having an ever-increasing impact on the way we live, work, and do business. Through our next MAX Academy on Wednesday, October 30th, we will explore the use of AI in the workforce development field. Specifically, we will learn about the growing applications of AI and review ethical considerations when using AI. We will then review tools for leveraging AI in our everyday use of Microsoft Word, PowerPoint, Excel and learn about device settings for optimizing AI. And we will dive into specific resume, interviewing, and job search tools and strategies using AI. Click here to learn more and register.

REMINDER: MAX Invites Workforce Developers in the Atlanta Region to Participate in the MAX 2024 Annual Survey: We are excited to invite you to participate in the MAX 2024 Annual Survey! The brief survey, the fifth annual survey by MAX, aims to collect your input on important workforce matters affecting the landscape for employers and job seekers in metro Atlanta. In addition, the advisement shared by workforce developers will inform how MAX can best serve the workforce community in the days ahead. If you are a workforce developer serving in the Atlanta region, we would be grateful for you to share your thoughts through this survey. While the survey takes less than 5 minutes, we trust it will yield much insight for us to explore how we can be helpful to you in the days ahead. Thanks much for your consideration in sharing your thoughts. We look forward to learning from you! Click here to complete the brief survey today.

ARE YOU A MAX MEMBER? If not, what are you waiting for? Join MAX and engage with a strong and dynamic network of workforce professionals who stand ready to provide peer-to-peer support and explore how to work jointly in best serving the job seeker and employer. - Brookings is hosting a Navigating New Global Dynamics Challenges and Policies event on Monday, October 21st, from 2:30 PM to 4:15 PM, at the Brookings Institution – Falk Auditorium (1775 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C. 20036). The world faces a conflux of powerful forces of change. Digital technologies and advances in artificial intelligence are transforming markets, economies, and societies. Global geopolitics is shifting, and the rise of China is challenging the postwar international order led by the United States. Geopolitical tensions are elevated, and so are political polarization and societal anxieties within countries as change creates winners and losers. Nationalist industrial policies and protectionism are surging. Added to this mosaic of transformation is climate change, which will have profound effects on global patterns of production, investment, and trade. On October 21, the Global Economy and Development program at Brookings, jointly with the Korea Development Institute (KDI), will convene a panel of experts to discuss the challenges of navigating these new global dynamics. This will be an in-person public event; it will also be livestreamed for those joining online. Viewers can submit questions by emailing events@brookings.edu. - The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) is hosting a webinar on The Hidden Costs of Outdated Technology: How It's Holding Your Business Back on Tuesday, October 22nd, starting at 2:00 PM. With the rapid pace of changing technology, small to mid-sized businesses (SMBs) must prioritize technologies that will deliver the greatest return for their people and their bottom line. Many businesses continue to use obsolete technology for many reasons, including perceived costs of a new system, reliance on legacy systems due to current processes, use of niche solutions to fill current technology gaps, fear of change, or lack of leadership support for a new solution. But what happens when businesses take too long to make critical decisions about technology or process improvements? During this engaging presentation, Julie Develin, Senior Partner of HCM Advisory at UKG and a seasoned HR practitioner, will share insights into how SMBs can understand the true cost of inaction and how they can use technology to realize considerable benefits, including cost savings and improved productivity, employee engagement, data visibility, and compliance. - The Aspen Institute is hosting a webinar on Community Benefits Agreements: A Tool for Creating Good Jobs on Wednesday, October 23rd, starting at 2:00 PM. Announcements of a big employer moving to town, or a large infrastructure project, can often spark excitement. Local communities see a potential for big benefits, including new and better jobs and other investment in community needs. Too often, these benefits do not materialize. Community Benefits Agreements (CBAs), binding agreements created between community groups, local government, and organizations like real estate developers or large employers, are a powerful alternative that ensures people have a real say in shaping the outcomes these new investments will create for their communities. In this webinar, co-hosted by JMA and the Aspen Institute Economic Opportunities Program, we'll hear from experts and practitioners about their experiences implementing CBAs and leveraging them to improve job quality in their communities. This event is part of the Economic Opportunities Program's Job Quality in Practice series, which examines the strategies and approaches practitioners are using to improve job quality and expand economic opportunity. Click here to register via Zoom.

- The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) is hosting a webinar on Overcoming Today’s Payroll Complexity Crisis on Wednesday, October 23rd, starting at 2:00 PM. Payroll has always been complex. But as the world of work evolves to include different types of work and workers, regulations continually expand and AI and automation become more deeply embedded in organizational processes, the complexity of payroll is multiplied. In new Dayforce research conducted in partnership with PayrollOrg, they asked payroll professionals about the complexities of modern payroll and how they are experiencing those challenges. They found a negative impact, with 58 percent saying it has gotten harder to be a payroll professional in the past two years. But the results also reveal a roadmap for overcoming today’s payroll complexity crisis. Click here to learn more and register.
- The Aspen Institute is hosting an It’s Women in the Economy, Stupid! webinar on Thursday, October 24th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. Over the last 50 years, the value of women’s financial contributions to families and our national economy has increased exponentially. More women are working than ever before. Women are earning advanced degrees and starting businesses at higher rates than men. Yet even today, our nation’s economic systems are still not designed to work for women. In fact, policymakers and business leaders—predominantly men—rarely ask if women benefit from tax, labor, credit, monetary, or other areas of economic policy, and hence, women often don’t. The Future of Women in the Economy dialogue series, hosted by the Aspen Institute Financial Security Program, features in-depth discussions with journalists, authors, filmmakers, and other thought leaders about how to redesign the economy so women are able to strive, thrive, and fully contribute to their families’ financial security and the nation’s economic growth. To discuss the current state of women in the economy, first we need to know how we got here. To kick off The Future of Women in the Economy, two prominent writers—Josie Cox, author of the award-winning book WOMEN Money Power; and Chabeli Carrazana, economy reporter for The 19th News – explore historical perceptions of “women’s roles,” economic barriers past and present, and the many proven solutions that remain untapped due to lack of political will. This wide-ranging virtual conversation will help attendees better understand why building a gender-equitable economy is not a “women’s” or “social” issue, but an economic imperative. - Brookings is hosting a webinar on Could a Right to Remote Work Stop Declining Birth Rates on Thursday, October 24th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. The COVID-19 pandemic normalized working from home in the U.S., and the number of workers in remote and hybrid work arrangements remains elevated compared to pre-pandemic levels despite the end of the public health emergency. One benefit of remote work is that it allows parents to spend more time on childcare and housework—potentially reducing the barriers to starting a family. Although the decline in fertility rates is a complex and multifaceted problem, the recent trend in remote work raises questions around if and how flexible work arrangements could help fertility rates rebound. Specifically, could a right to request flexible work that is enshrined in law combat declining birth rates? On October 24th, the Center on Regulation and Markets at Brookings will explore these questions with an expert panel featuring Rachel Arnow-Richman (University of Florida Levin College of Law), Phil Levine (Wellesley College), Thomas Roulet (University of Cambridge), and Lyman Stone (Institute for Family Studies), moderated by Loni Mahanta (aiEDU). - The National Association of Workforce Development Professionals (NAWDP) is hosting a virtual 30 Minutes of Excellence Session: Deploying Your Skills – Supporting Veterans Transition to the Workforce on Wednesday, November 13th, from 1:00 PM to 1:30 PM. Veterans are so essential to the workforce, not only domestically but internationally as well. Their special skills, experiences, and training brings added benefits to any organization. Transitioning out of the military can be a scary and difficult task, to say the least. For the many years that they served, Veterans haven't experienced what the transitioning period of leaving the service brings to the forefront. There isn't a guaranteed 1st and 15th paycheck, no healthcare for yourself and your family any longer, unless you retired (20 years or more served or you are medically retired from the military). Veterans must move their families to a location that they deem fit for success of employment, education, and housing. The most important aspect of transitioning is finding constant employment to be able to survive in the civilian world. Join this “30 Minutes of Excellence Session” facilitated by Antwon Jacobs, as he discusses the importance of supporting transitioning service members, and strategies to support them through their journey. - The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) is hosting a webinar on Brain-Based Career Development on Tuesday, December 3rd, from 1:00 PM to 2:00 PM. For most individuals, the career development process is inherently overwhelming due to the sheer amount of information and future-based thinking that goes along with making life-altering decisions. In today's world of information overload, practitioners must understand the brain's biological limits and the impact this has on career development. Research in neuropsychology has highlighted limitations in the processing power of specific areas within the human brain. During this session, you'll learn about the Brain-Cased Career Development model—which examines decision-making and taking action from a brain-based perspective—to help avoid becoming overwhelmed by information overload. - The National League of Cities (NLC) is hosting a webinar on RFP 101 – Developing an Effective Healthcare Benefits Proposal on Thursday, December 5th, from 1:00 PM to 1:45 PM. A Request for Proposal (RFP) is an open request for bids to complete a new project. It is meant to open competition and encourage a variety of alternative proposals. RFPs can help organizations study different approaches and costs to find the best option for their needs. Without a complete understanding of how to write an effective request for a proposal, your RFP won't clearly and accurately define your project needs. This 45-minute webinar will discuss best practices for developing effective healthcare benefits proposals. Participants will gain a deeper understanding of RFP processes and how to avoid the common pitfalls such as lack of clarity to create a standout proposal that generates clear responses from your vendors. - The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) is hosting an Inside the ATS: Help Your Students Write Resumes that Beat the System on Tuesday, December 10th, from 1:00 PM to 2:00 PM. Here's the tough truth: Recruiters handle 30-40 open roles at once, with each role drawing in around 250 resumes. They can't read every one. Instead, they rely on Applicant Tracking Systems (ATS) to filter out most candidates. Help your students get noticed, not overlooked. Join Jeremy Schifeling, author and founder of The Job Insiders, for this practical session! Click here to learn more and register.

- The National League of Cities (NLC) is hosting an Early Childhood Success Live "Newsletter" on Tuesday, December 10th, from 1:30 PM to 2:30 PM. The Early Childhood Success team at the National League of Cities is thrilled to present our 'Live Newsletter' webinar. In this session, we will share the latest insights from cities across the country, showcasing innovative strategies and best practices for advancing early childhood priorities. During the webinar, you'll have the opportunity to explore what cities are doing to enhance early childhood success and engage in meaningful peer sharing. This is a fantastic chance to stay informed, connect with other city staff, and collaborate on advancing early childhood initiatives in your community. Click here to learn more and register.
- The National Coalition of Advanced Technology Centers (NCATC) is hosting a Quarterly Drop-In Webinar: Competency-Based Education (CBE) and Industry-Recognized Credentials (IRCs) and Applied Skills on Thursday, December 12th, starting at 2:00 PM. This session will focus on one of the four strategic focus areas or pillars. The goal is to sustain problem-solving ideas, relationships, and conversations. - The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) is hosting a webinar on the Synergy of Success: Alumni Mentoring, Career Development and Academic Partnerships on Tuesday, January 28th, from 1:00 PM to 2:00 PM. In recent years, colleges and universities have faced growing pressure to meet the career expectations of students and their families. The rising cost of tuition has led many to question the return on investment, expecting degrees to offer vocational training, networking opportunities, and competitive post-graduate salaries. This raises the question: How can institutions meet these expectations? Cross-campus collaboration is key. Functional areas from admissions to alumni relations can contribute to a career-focused approach that supplements the academic curriculum. At Iona University, we have developed a cost-effective solution: a comprehensive mentoring program. This initiative focuses on career preparation through student-alumni mentoring opportunities. An advisory board ensures continuous improvement and involvement from campus partners and alumni. We are eager to share our experience, showcasing the collaboration between alumni engagement and career development. We will discuss our preparation for the program launch, sustaining support, and plans for expansion. Key points will include curriculum development for the one-credit course, career development workshops, and the careful selection and preparation of alumni mentors. - The National Association of Workforce Boards (NAWB) is hosting Workforce Advocacy Day on Tuesday, April 1st, starting at 2:00 PM, at Washington Hilton/US Capitol (1919 Connecticut Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20009). Workforce Advocacy Day is a terrific opportunity to tell the story of workforce development in your community and to let Congress know how they can support our vital work. NAWB will provide online advocacy training and support in advance of the event and will provide all the materials needed. NAWB will also arrange your meetings on Capitol Hill with our partner, Advocacy Associates, who will provide an app that you can download to make your experience as simple as possible. No previous advocacy experience is necessary. Click here to learn more and register.

- The Manufacturing Institute is hosting the 2025 Women MAKE Awards on Thursday, April 24th, 2025, at the Anthem (901 Wharf Street, SW, Washington, D.C., 20024). Women are the largest talent opportunity to close the skills gap in the manufacturing industry. They also increase innovation and drive the future of our workforce. The Women MAKE Awards recognize women gamechangers working in the manufacturing industry who exemplify leadership within their companies. This national honor identifies top talent in manufacturing and further encourages award winners to mentor and support the next generation of female talent to pursue modern manufacturing careers. This ceremony will give women across the country a platform to showcase the incredible opportunities the industry has to offer, whether they are running the company, designing the next big product or testing innovations on the shop floor. - From The Aspen Institute: Job quality and the work of ensuring that all jobs are good jobs is intertwined with a complex landscape of laws and regulations – rules operating at the local, state, and federal levels that set important standards, establish protocols, and stand up safeguards that help workers have safe, fair, and equitable workplaces. Compliance is an essential component of advancing good jobs practices and systems across the U.S. and, as our team at the Aspen Institute Economic Opportunities Program (EOP) has conducted site visits and interviews, a topic that we are hearing prioritized among both business owners and workers. - From Brookings: AI offers a massive opportunity to transform the economy, perhaps especially in the realm of health care delivery. To date, much of the attention paid to AI has been focused on labor productivity, social implications, and corporate profits. We believe the lack of attention paid to health care pricing, efficacy, and utilization is an oversight; AI has already demonstrated substantial progress and enormous potential in improving health care outcomes. - From Center for American Progress: Thanks to bipartisan congressional efforts during the Trump administration and the leadership of the Biden-Harris administration to continue the economic stimulus, the United States has more than fully recovered. In fact, economic growth has outpaced projections that were made before the COVID-19 pandemic. In other words, the economy in 2024 is stronger than experts had predicted it would be in 2024 before COVID-19 even happened. And it is stronger now than it was projected to be by 2024 at the beginning of the Biden-Harris administration. Click here to read more.
- From Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: Although federal legislation is needed to completely end cost recovery, states have authority, through a combination of federal options, to pay collected support, including both current and past-due support, to current and former TANF families. There is momentum among states to expand policies that direct child support to families. To date, more than half of states have elected to pay families at least some of the child support payments instead of keeping them as state revenues. Click here to read more.

- From Economic Policy Institute: Teacher shortages existed in the lead up to COVID-19. These shortages were exacerbated in the wake of the pandemic as the attractiveness of teaching—both in terms of relative pay and work conditions—plummeted relative to many other jobs held by similarly educated workers. Today’s labor market for teachers is characterized by an excess of openings relative to hires and a rising quits rate (and one that is historically high for the profession). - From FedCommunities: Whether filling out a digital job application, performing online banking, or completing remote coursework, having internet access is crucial to fully participate in the modern economy. However, many communities—particularly those that are rural or low-income—face significant financial and technical hurdles to getting connected. To combat this, grassroots organizations, state and federal offices, and Federal Reserve Banks have all joined the fight to close the digital divide to support a more inclusive economy. - From the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta: Part one showed increased educational attainment across all groups. As such, resolving barriers to accessing higher education could help boost economic mobility for more Americans. However, we must also acknowledge that college is not a one-size-fits-all solution. It is therefore important to find solutions to remedy the real earnings decrease, higher rates of unemployment, and lower rates of labor force participation for workers without a college degree. Workforce practitioners and policymakers have an opportunity to leverage federal legislation like the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act to ensure their states receive funding for workforce training programs to upskill workers and to proliferate jobs—especially ones that do not require a college degree. - From Gallup Workplace Insights: While there are different dimensions that build a “good” life, and these could make someone feel they are better off, the economy serves as a broad indicator of national health and directly impacts individuals' daily lives. Other research shows the relationship between the economy and personal wellbeing. Historical trends suggest that perceptions of personal wellbeing and economic confidence can significantly impact election outcomes. With a majority of Americans feeling they are not better off than four years ago, economic confidence remaining low, and less than half of Americans saying now is a good time to find a quality job, the economy will be an important consideration at the ballot box this year. - From the International Association of Workforce Professionals (IAWP): Unlike past technological shifts, which primarily affected routine blue-collar jobs, generative AI is expected to disrupt middle- to higher-income professions, especially those involving “cognitive” and “nonroutine” tasks. - From the National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE): Salaries for college graduates overall continue to climb as, for the second straight year, the increase in average salary for a graduating class has surpassed 7%, according to NACE’s Summer 2024 Salary Survey report, the final report on salaries for the Class of 2023. The final overall average salary for the Class of 2023 of $64,291 is up 7.1% over the average of $60,028 for Class of 2022 graduates. - From the National Association of Counties (NACO): When people contribute to the safety, well-being, and resilience of their communities, they are participating in something bigger than themselves; they are working toward a society that reflects their goals and values. Civic engagement — the actions carried out by residents to improve the quality of life in their communities — shapes health outcomes. Civically engaged community members enjoy boosts to their mental wellness and greater social connectedness, among other benefits. Click here to read more.
- From the National Association of Workforce Boards (NAWB): The potential for greater integration between workforce boards and small businesses is significant. Earlier this year, NAWB and the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) signed a Strategic Alliance Memorandum (SAM) to enhance collaboration and resource access. The SBA is an ideal partner for NAWB, representing nearly 600 Workforce Development Boards that collaborate with education and economic development stakeholders to deliver regional workforce programs tailored to job seekers, businesses, and communities. Workforce boards manage over 2,300 American Job Centers and partner with various organizations to serve both businesses and job seekers effectively. Click here to read more.
- From the National Conference of State Legislatures: Regulation, she said, was important so businesses can have certainty and surety to adopt AI at scale. “It requires standards, requires guardrails, things that businesses can point to say, ‘I have met the criteria for what good AI looks like and I am being accountable and transparent.’ In our view, I think it’s an enabler of innovation and it enables more companies, especially medium-size and smaller-size enterprises to know what the rules of play are.” Click here to read more.
- From the National League of Cities (NLC): Paid leave can take many forms, including paid family and medical leave, paid sick time, paid time off and bereavement leave. At the federal, state and local level, there are varying laws that require both government and non-government employees to receive a combination of paid and unpaid leave. Paid leave offers many benefits; however, there are additional costs that are associated with paid leave policies, both to public and private employers. Click here to read more.

- From the National Fund for Workforce Solutions: Even as the pandemic subsided, labor shortages among essential workers like nurses, surgical technicians, and medical assistants persist. Healthcare remains one of the largest sectors of the U.S. economy, employing over 20 million people, roughly 12.5% of the working population as of 2022. As the population ages, the demand for healthcare workers will continue to grow. However, the COVID crisis exacerbated tightness in the U.S. labor market, which experts believe will be with us for the foreseeable future. This is a wake-up call to the entire sector to rethink its approach to recruiting and retaining employees. Click here to read more.
- From the National Skills Coalition: Today's working families need support to help them build a life that enables them to achieve financial stability and helps their families to thrive. The direct care and childcare workforce play a vital role by providing daily assistance to older adults, people with disabilities, and children. Families count on them for essential care, for respite, and for the peace of mind that allows them to balance their own work responsibilities with family needs. People's ability to meet their family's needs is closely tied to their success on the job, making care work a critical pillar of both personal and professional wellbeing. Yet, despite this vital role, care workers and families continue to struggle thanks to a lack of policy investments at the state and federal level. Click here to read more.
- From Prosperity Now: Today's Consumer Price Index (CPI) data reveals encouraging signs of inflation easing, with the annual rate falling to 2.4%, the lowest since February 2021. However, despite the slowing pace of inflation, barriers to financial stability persist, particularly in the realm of homeownership. The slight 0.2% increase in the Consumer Price Index for all Urban Consumers (CPI-U) in September indicates that the fight for affordable living is far from over. These increases failed to meet economists expectations, meaning that a return to annualized 2% inflation still seems far off. Click here to read more.
- From the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM): On average, the cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) translates to an increase of more than $50 per month, the agency said, making the estimated monthly average $1,976, up from $1,907 this year. Roughly 68 million people, including retirees and disabled workers, receive Social Security payments. The annual COLA announced for 2025 reflects cooling inflation and is one of the lowest in recent years—lower than this year's 3.2% jump and a far cry from the 8.7% boost seen in 2023. The announcement comes on the heels of the latest Consumer Price Index report, also out Oct. 10, which found that inflation rose 2.4% year-over-year in September. Click here to read more.

- From the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: Life sciences innovation occurs across an ecosystem, with the business community, universities, private capital, and governments each playing a role in the development of the next generation of medical innovation. However, policies that governments put in place can either help foster investment in innovation or stop it in its tracks. As research from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce demonstrates, market restrictive policies—such as price controls—lead to fewer new medicines, less research and development (R&D) into new treatments, and longer wait times for patients. These policies will also cause America to forfeit its global leadership in life-science innovation. Click here to read more.
- From Workforce Monitor: Our research paints a picture of immigrants not as economic burdens but as valuable assets who enhance their host and home countries' positions in the global economy. By making sophisticated trade linkages possible, and by boosting participation in global value chains, immigrants contribute to economic growth and development in ways that go far beyond conventional understanding. - From WorkingNation: Traditionally, high school has been the first time most students sit down with a career counselor to discuss options after graduation – whether it is attending a four-year college or seeking other career-building options such as an associate’s degrees, certification, or apprenticeship. But, many schools have just one or two counselors available to advise as many as a thousand students. Starting these discussions earlier could be an answer. More and more, states are finding that starting that career exploration in middle school is an important part of a young student’s educational journey. Click here to read more.
- From WorkRise: The prison credential dilemma examined in this study illustrates just one of the many challenges that formerly incarcerated individuals face as they reenter the US labor market. By strategically presenting certificates and work experiences at different points in the hiring process, these job applicants hope that their credentials demonstrate employability without disqualifying them. Partnerships that include technical colleges providing those credentials, support navigating external educational opportunities, and appropriate job placement services may address the stigma faced by formerly incarcerated individuals when reentering the labor market. Click here to read more.

MAX PROVIDER PORTAL

The MAX Provider Portal was launched in 2014 to help local leaders gain a better understanding of metro Atlanta's workforce ecosystem – namely, who is doing what, where, and for whom. The portal provides the most comprehensive picture of our workforce ecosystem. Providers in the portal can share information on the populations and geographies they serve, the services (job search & placement, postemployment services, supportive services, and soft skills training) they provide, the specific occupations and industries they support, and more. The MAX Provider Council oversees and informs the ongoing development of the MAX Provider Portal. Click here to access the MAX Provider Portal.
