MAX MONDAYS: APRIL 6, 2026

MAX Mondays provides a central place to stay abreast of the many workforce happenings in our region and state. Special thanks to everyone for your submittals and efforts to keep our workforce development community informed!

MAX RFP BOARD: CareerRise Seeks Proposals for Qualitative Research on Women and Non-Traditional Occupations: CareerRise seeks proposals from qualified consultants or firms to conduct qualitative research exploring women’s perceptions and experiences related to non-traditional occupations (NTOs) — including careers in construction, skilled trades, and manufacturing. The goal of this project is to better understand how young women view NTO career pathways, what attracts or deters women to enter these occupations, and what workplace practices can make these fields specifically and apprenticeships generally more inclusive and supportive for women. Findings from this research will inform future outreach, program development, and employer engagement efforts under the Women in Apprenticeships and Non-traditional Occupations (WANTO) Project. REMINDER: MAX to Host Next MAX Academy, Presented by Google, on Mastering Apprenticeships and Pre-Apprenticeships: Apprenticeships are a proven, high-impact workforce strategy that align education with real-world industry needs. By combining paid, hands-on training with structured classroom instruction, apprenticeships create clear pathways to skilled careers while enabling employers to develop talent tailored to their specific workforce demands. During our next MAX Academy, presented by Google, participants will be led into a comprehensive deep dive into the structure, strategy, and success factors of high-quality apprenticeship and pre-apprenticeship programs. Designed for workforce professionals, the Academy will explore the full lifecycle of apprenticeship development—from foundational concepts to measurable outcomes. - TrainHRLearning is hosting Independent Contractor vs. Employee New Rule Issued by the Department of Labor on Tuesday, April 7th, starting at 2:00 PM. Failure to comply with the new rules can have devastating financial consequences and can result in back pay for overtime not paid, the IRS penalizing you for back income taxes, FICA and states going after you for unpaid income taxes, workers compensation premiums and unemployment payments. A federal court in Virginia has entered a judgment ordering a Norfolk-based medical staffing agency, which intentionally violated federal laws by classifying their workers as independent contractors and denied employees their rightfully earned overtime wages, to pay more than $7.2 million in back wages and liquidated damages. As you can see, violating the law regarding independent contractors can be very expensive. Complying with the new rules is just a smart business practice. Human Resources professionals, business owners, supervisors, and managers will all benefit from this informative webinar. Click here to learn more and register.
- WorkforceGPS is hosting a webinar on Performance Reporting Resources – How and When to Use Them (Pulling it all Together) on Tuesday, April 7th, from 2:00 PM to 3:30 PM. - The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) is hosting a webinar on Empowering Students to Advocate for Accommodations in the Employment Process on Wednesday, April 8th, from 1:00 PM to 2:00 PM. Many students with disabilities enter college experienced in using academic accommodations but often face uncertainty about when and how to disclose their disability or request accommodations during internship and job searches, particularly if not connected with career services. At Northwestern University, about 13% of undergraduates/graduate students are registered with the student disability services, AccessibleNU, though many more identify as having a disability informally. To address these challenges, Northwestern Career Advancement launched a workshop series to help students develop effective strategies for disclosure and accommodation requests through information sharing and roleplay activities that build confidence and skills. This presentation highlights workshop outcomes and offers practical approaches for career services professionals to support students navigating disclosure and accessibility in the hiring process. - The National Association of Counties (NACo) is hosting AI Meets Information Governance in the Public Sector on Wednesday, April 8th, from 1:00 PM to 2:00 PM. Public sector AI adoption is caught in a "regulatory paradox": a strong push for rapid innovation occurring alongside a lack of clear roadmaps and regulations for information safety. Data privacy regulations remain in full force. For government information owners, the burden of responsibility for information governance has landed squarely on your shoulders. To innovate and modernize while keeping your information safe, you need a responsible information governance model that ensures only high-quality, compliant data is available for AI tools. During this session, NACo will explore the four immediate steps you can take to ensure your agency's AI adoption is secure, compliant, and trustworthy. Click here to learn more and register.
- The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) is hosting Skillfishing: When the Hire Looks Perfect – Until the Work Begins on Wednesday, April 8th, starting at 1:00 PM. Every HR leader has experienced it. A candidate interviews well. Their resume looks impressive. Their credentials check out. The hire feels like a win. Then the work starts — and the capabilities aren't there. This growing workplace challenge — often referred to as skillfishing — happens when organizations hire based on perceived expertise that turns out to be overstated or incomplete once the employee is on the job. While the dynamic isn't new, today's hiring environment is making it easier for it to happen. AI-generated resumes, sophisticated personal branding, rapid credential programs, and interview coaching can all make candidates appear highly qualified, even when their underlying capabilities haven't caught up. For employers, the consequences of a bad hire are manifold. Skillfishing can slow teams down, erode trust, increase turnover, and create significant financial and operational costs. Join Alex Alonso, SHRM's chief knowledge officer, AJ Faraj, founder of SorsX, and Nicole Belyna, host of SHRM's Honest HR podcast, for a clear-eyed look at how skillfishing actually happens — and what organizations can do about it. Click here to learn more and register.

- The National Association of State Workforce Agencies (NASWA) is hosting a Workforce Community Roundtable: Work Authorization Verification on Wednesday, April 8th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. Workforce Information Technology Support Center (Workforce ITSC), in partnership with the U.S. Department of Labor, is hosting a virtual roundtable to explore the changes to TEGL 10-23, Change 2 (Work Authorization Verification in Grant Programs Administered by the Employment and Training Administration). TEGL 10-23, Change 2 requires workforce agencies to ensure individuals served through participant-level services have valid work authorization, creating new operational and system demands for states and local areas. Designed as a peer-driven conversation, this session is a chance to compare approaches and learn from other states as you plan updates to systems and business processes that are consistent and efficient across programs and partners. - The National League of Cities (NLC) is hosting a Sally AI Masterclass: Fixing Cybersecurity Problems End-to-End in Government & Critical Infrastructure on Wednesday, April 8th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. Cybersecurity challenges in government and critical infrastructure are no longer isolated to one tool, one report or one team. They are systemic, interconnected and increasingly scrutinized by leadership, auditors, insurers and the public. This masterclass demonstrates how Sally fixes and addresses the real cybersecurity problems faced by small, medium and large government agencies — end-to-end, across the full defense-in-depth stack. Most agencies already have cyber tools, assessments and reports. The challenge isn't a lack of data — it's a lack of a coordinated way to fix risk across the defense-in-depth stack. This session shows how Sally addresses that gap in practice. Click here to learn more and register.

- The Aspen Institute is hosting Coming of Age at Work: Good Jobs for Teens on Tuesday, April 21st, from 2:00 PM to 3:15 PM. A young person’s first job is a rite of passage in the US — an opportunity to build skills, save for college, support the family business, or support themselves and their loved ones. And after decades of decline, more teens are working today than at any point since 2008. Yet the labor market often fails them. Many face low wages, unpredictable or burdensome schedules that interfere with school, unsafe or discriminatory conditions, limited opportunities for growth, belonging, and purpose. At the same time, innovative approaches like apprenticeship, training on safety and worker rights, and purposeful support and mentorship show what’s possible when we get it right: jobs that build confidence, provide fair compensation, and open doors to future careers. As we prepare the next generation of workers and community members, the question is clear: what would it take to make every teen’s first job a good job and ensure the labor market delivers for young workers? Join the Aspen Institute to explore how to create meaningful work opportunities for teens while protecting them from dangerous and exploitative conditions. This event is the second in our two-part series, Exploring the Past, Present, and Future of Youth at Work. Click here to learn more and register.
- The Coalition of Adult Basic Education (COABE) is hosting “One Person. One Plan. Many Partners” on Tuesday, April 21st, starting at 2:00 PM. Every individual on a second-chance journey has a different story, different challenges, and different goals. A one-size-fits-all approach simply doesn’t work. In this webinar, COABE will explore how personalized learning and support pathways can help individuals identify their strengths, address their needs, and build a meaningful path forward. Through the Nucleos platform, education, career development, mental health resources, reentry support, and essential soft skills can come together to form a coordinated strategy for success. - The National Conference of State Legislatures (NCSL) is hosting a webinar on Diagnosing Root Causes and Driving Results or The 5 Layers of Cause Framework on Tuesday, April 21st, starting at 2:00 PM. Causal information moves beyond describing the state of the world to knowing how to change it, which has direct implications for approaching issues in the auditing world. Determining why processes, programs, initiatives and interventions are underperforming is the key to the solution. Identifying the causes of organizational issues leads to effective recommendations that make the organization better. “The Five Layers of Cause Framework” helps identify both the root causes of poor performance and recommendations to address the underlying causes. - From Accenture: Energy companies are crossing a threshold in their relationship with artificial intelligence. The first phase proved AI could work in upstream operations. Teams tested what was possible, built models and stood up data platforms. That work mattered. But it also exposed a harder truth. Value is no longer determined by the ability to build models. It is determined by the ability to scale them into everyday work. Click here to read more.
- From The Annie E. These ideas were central to the National Conference of State Legislatures' (NCSL) Youth Justice Fellowship. The inaugural fellowship brought together 17 state legislators from across the political spectrum. Lawmakers examined what works in youth justice reform and how to apply those lessons in their home states. Click here to read more.
- From The Aspen Institute: Internships are a hot topic across conversations with universities, students, ecosystem advocates, and employers. We know we can create a world where students graduate with a paid work-based learning experience. Achieving this goal requires more than just student interest — it requires a deep understanding of the employer's perspective on what value an internship brings to their organization. - From Brookings: The assumption that AI primarily affects older children is wrong. For the youngest children, the consequences may be especially impactful—and the least visible. AI can often be invisible, but it still shapes the way a parent/caregiver raises a child; the child cannot choose, question, consent to, or even recognize the use of technologies that are shaping their earliest experiences. - From Center for American Progress: The Medigap trap is a predictable—and reversible—result of policy choices: Medicare's lack of catastrophic protection, Medicare Advantage's payment advantages, and restrictive enrollment rules that combine to funnel beneficiaries into private plans and lock them there. The reforms outlined in this report would both prevent beneficiaries from falling into the Medigap trap and offer a way out for those already in it. Click here to read more.

- From Economic Policy Institute: Comprehensive, universal Paid Family and Medical Leave (PFML) programs are powerful tools to safeguard and improve the economic well-being and overall health of workers and their families. Research shows that PFML improves health for both mothers and infants, reduces poverty and economic insecurity for low-income families, and increases labor force participation rates for mothers for up to five years after the birth of their child. In states that do not have a PFML program, workers lose an estimated $34.3 billion annually in wages due to leave-related absences from work, including $18.8 billion lost by women. - From FedCommunities: As the single largest expense for most consumers, housing costs play a major role in how people make ends meet. A home is often both a homeowner's primary wealth building opportunity and their largest source of debt. And with over $34 trillion in home equity and nearly $17 trillion owed on residential mortgages in 2025, housing sector stability matters to the health of the overall US economy. Housing cost and availability also significantly affect the labor force. If workers can't afford good-quality homes in economically dynamic regions, businesses may struggle to fill needed roles. - From the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta: For many workers and job seekers, concern about the stability of the labor market remains pervasive. While some workers we spoke with expressed confidence that they would be able to find a new position, if necessary, most indicated that the job would likely represent a downgrade in terms of wages, schedule, or benefits or all three. Most workers we interviewed were actively looking for jobs, regardless of employment status. Worker-serving organizations and job seekers alike reported that navigating the labor market has become harder. Many employed workers reported staying in less-than-ideal jobs because of the lack of better options—a phenomenon called job hugging. Click here to read more.
- From Gallup Workplace Insights: Self-employed workers, who remain a small but growing share of the U.S. workforce, are often not examined except in the largest of surveys. The results presented here show that certain aspects of self-employment promote higher job quality, including greater say in how and when to complete job tasks and more influence over factors affecting job conditions. These aspects make up for some of the trade-offs inherent in self-employment, such as longer hours, encroachments on personal time, and lack of healthcare and retirement benefits. - From the International Association of Workforce Professionals (IAWP): A bipartisan group of U.S. senators has introduced legislation that could shape how the nation prepares for the workforce implications of artificial intelligence. If enacted, the commission would bring together bipartisan members of Congress along with experts from industry, academia, and federal agencies focused on labor, education, and economic policy. The goal would be to provide Congress with structured analysis and practical policy recommendations addressing the rapidly evolving role of artificial intelligence in the labor market. - From Jobs for the Future: Although Workforce Pell is a financial aid program on the surface, it may serve as a catalyst to look at state investments, accountability systems, student success, and systems alignment all in the nondegree space. Too often, nondegree programs that fall outside of Title IV lack reporting or data elements; it's a bit of a mystery as to what is happening as a whole. We may know which programs and credentials exist, but we don't know enough about the quality, outcomes, and interactions of nondegree programs. Click here to read more.
- From JPMorganChase: JPMorganChase announced the American Dream Initiative (ADI)—a multi-year effort to help expand opportunity to millions of Americans and future generations through targeted investments in local communities across the United States. Building on years of advancing local solutions that deliver results, the firm will significantly expand investments in proven initiatives that help make the economy work for more people, including by helping them start and grow small businesses, find affordable places to live, save and plan for their financial futures, get good jobs, access quality healthcare and strengthen the local institutions on which communities rely. - From Manpower: According to our recent Work Intelligence Lab's Global Talent Barometer research, global employees feel settled in the jobs they hold currently, but are far less comfortable with what might be coming down the road. This research provided an aggregate 2026 employee satisfaction score of 67%, meaning it has remained stable across three years of reporting. Around the globe, wide gaps exist between the most satisfied and least satisfied workers. Click here to read more.
- From McKinsey & Company: The North American automotive industry has an opportunity to set itself on a more adaptive, resilient, and competitive track. The strategies outlined in this article chart a clear path forward, suggesting actions that make the most of external partnerships while overhauling operational capabilities. Automotive companies can compete as an ecosystem to combine strengths across sectors and reduce redundant R&D. And they can revamp internally so they can regain economies of scale, accelerate product launches, and build next-generation capabilities. Click here to read more.

- From the National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE): Student engagement does not begin with a single program. It is built through trust, visibility, and consistent value delivery. When career development is integrated across academic departments, student organizations, athletics, and co-curricular touchpoints, students are far more likely to opt into signature initiatives. A strong career ecosystem creates readiness for participation. Click here to read more.
- From the National Association of Counties (NACO): On March 25, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) announced $1 billion in funding through the Building Resilient Infrastructure and Communities (BRIC) program to support disaster mitigation and recovery efforts. This funding presents a significant opportunity for counties to strengthen infrastructure, enhance community resilience and reduce future disaster impacts. Click here to read more.
- From the National Association of Workforce Boards (NAWB): The National Association of Workforce Boards (NAWB) announced a partnership with Microsoft Elevate to equip job seekers, career coaches, and workforce agency professionals with the artificial intelligence skills needed to succeed in today's rapidly changing labor market. The initiative brings free, practical AI training to workforce development organizations nationwide. Through this collaboration, NAWB and Microsoft Elevate have developed a suite of LinkedIn Learning courses grounded in real-world scenarios created with workforce professionals. - From the National Conference of State Legislatures: State rainy day funds—money reserved to cover unexpected expenses and patch short-term budget holes—are declining nationally as states face increased costs, lower tax revenue and federal budget cuts, a new analysis found. The decline follows a period of strong reserves bolstered by federal pandemic aid and higher-than-expected tax collections, the report said. Researchers at The Pew Charitable Trusts found that the number of days that state reserves could cover state operations fell in fiscal year 2025—the first decline since the Great Recession. - From the National League of Cities (NLC): AI is empowering everyone, good and bad actors alike, and many local governments are already on the path to adoption. AI can help automate many of the tedious, repetitive tasks that bog down government employees. Several cities have launched initiatives to improve 3-1-1 services, with resident-facing chatbots or internal AI tools that efficiently process textual data. However, when official guidance and tooling lag, employees fill the gap themselves. Click here to read more.

- From the National Fund for Workforce Solutions: In February, the Activate Industry Leaders team closed out their Centering Workers in Job Design initiative with an in-person learning meeting in Washington, DC. We convened seven Network Partners and ten employers to celebrate their successes, uplift lessons learned during the project, and look ahead to how they'll continue this work now that the program has concluded. The meeting centered on hearing from Network Partners and their employer partners about the phenomenal work they led throughout the initiative. Click here to read more.
- From the National Skills Coalition: Discussions about AI's impact on the workforce tend to focus on what the new technology will mean for white-collar workers, many with higher incomes. But new research by the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco shifts the conversation by examining on-the-job exposure to AI among lower income workers. AI isn't just a story about high-earning knowledge workers. It's also reshaping the jobs of low-income workers. If we want AI to expand economic opportunity rather than narrow it, understanding how AI could impact lower-income workers matters. Click here to read more.
- From Prosperity Now: Each year, millions of eligible individuals do not claim valuable tax credits. In 2025, approximately 24 million workers and families benefited from the EITC, receiving nearly $70 billion in total credits, with an average refund of $2,894. When households receive refunds as intended, those funds can help cover essential expenses such as housing, groceries, childcare, utilities, and education. For many, a tax refund represents one of the largest single payments they receive all year. Click here to read more.
- From the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM): Despite a cooling labor market in 2025, many talent acquisition leaders grappled with an unexpected challenge: rising recruiting costs. According to the Recruitment Marketing Benchmark Report from Appcast, both cost-per-application (CPA) and cost-per-hire (CPH) climbed sharply, even as hiring demand softened and application volumes increased. At first glance, the trend appears to defy basic labor market logic. Click here to read more.
- From the Urban Institute: For young adults, access to social safety net benefit programs can be crucial not only for meeting immediate basic needs during periods of instability but also for supporting long-term economic success. Yet many eligible young adults do not receive the benefits they qualify for. We present findings for how many young adults are eligible for three key safety net supports and the share of eligible young adults who receive these benefits. Click here to read more.
- From the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: Broadband networks don't build—or modernize—themselves. They require sustained private investment, steady planning, and the ability to deploy infrastructure on real-world timelines. That's why permitting policy is so important.

- From Workday: Every wave of Workday innovation builds on the last, adding new AI agents, data tools, and financial capabilities to a platform that’s continuously updated throughout the year, not every few years. As humans and agentic teammates start working side by side, organizations need context, control, and trustworthy insight. These 2026 innovations are a major step toward that future, bringing agentic work to life with AI that understands your people, policies, and processes well enough to take action – while keeping humans firmly in charge. - From Workforce Monitor: U.S. staffing companies employed an average of two million temporary and contract workers per week in the fourth quarter of 2025, according to data released today by the American Staffing Association—up by 65,000 workers from the third quarter. A decline in year-to-year total staffing employment narrowed to 6.1% in the fourth quarter, an improvement from a year-to-year decline of 7.5% recorded in the third quarter. Click here to read more.
- From WorkingNation: There’s no single definition of rural America. Some rural communities are a small, but bustling, town center surrounded by vast swatches of farm land. Other communities are mountainous with a few homes and businesses scattered about the region. What they have in common is a population that wants to live and work in a community that offers a slower pace of life, one with financial stability. Providing quality jobs is key to making that happen. It takes a coalition of partners to make it work. While the number of U.S. farms continues a slow decline, and with tech playing an expanding role in all industries, the rural American job market is diversifying. The shift from traditional agricultural jobs towards manufacturing, clean energy, and health care is creating new opportunities that can provide that economic mobility and security. Click here to read more.
- From WorkRise: Broad-based employee ownership (EO) has long been recognized as a powerful tool to retain local businesses, build wealth and improve job quality for workers, and strengthen regional economies. The study’s in-depth survey of business owners and workers in Atlanta finds that most participants had little or no prior awareness of EO options—a knowledge gap that was particularly pronounced in Black communities compared with other demographics within the study. Though many workers expressed enthusiasm about the idea of ownership, economic precarity and limited access to on-the-job mentorship and training about EO models shaped their hesitancy to pursue employee ownership over other workplace benefits.
