MAX MONDAYS: JUNE 29, 2026

MAX Mondays provides a central place to stay abreast of the many workforce happenings in our region and state. Special thanks to everyone for your submittals and efforts to keep our workforce development community informed!

MAX Minutes with Rebecca Hunt, UGA Carl Vinson Institute of Government, Focused On How Demographic Trends are Reshaping Georgia's Workforce: On Friday, June 26th, Rebecca Hunt, Public Service Faculty with the University of Georgia, Carl Vinson Institute of Government, joined MAX to discuss how population trends and other changing demographics are reshaping Georgia's workforce and what this means for workforce professionals. Hunt emphasized that many of today's workforce challenges are rooted in demographic shifts rather than labor market conditions alone. Georgia continues to experience strong population growth, but much of that growth is occurring among adults age 65 and older, making it increasingly important to strengthen workforce participation, expand talent pipelines, and prepare for a rapidly changing economy. MAX RESOURCE LIBRARY: Deloitte's 2026 Global Human Capital Trends Report Focuses on Human-Centric Strategies: The 2026 Global Human Capital Trends report by Deloitte discusses how organizations can leverage human-centric strategies and adapt to rapid technological, economic, and societal changes to stay competitive and unlock human potential in the evolving future of work. The report authors observe how organizations are at a critical juncture where they must intentionally redesign work, culture, and decision-making to leverage human and AI collaboration for sustained competitive advantage. - The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) – Atlanta is hosting When AI Gets it Wrong and Nobody Notices: Governance, Accountability, and the Cost on Wednesday, July 29th, from 12:00 PM to 1:00 PM. Most AI governance discourse focuses on model-level risks: bias in training data, lack of explainability, regulatory non-compliance. These are real problems. However, the governance failures that cause the most damage in practice are not model failures; they are organizational failures. They happen when no human in the process has clear accountability for verifying AI outputs, when the speed of AI-assisted analysis creates institutional pressure to skip the validation step, and when the systems that should catch errors are themselves partially automated. In high-stakes environments, government, healthcare systems, public infrastructure, financial services, these organizational governance gaps are not hypothetical. They are operational realities with measurable human costs. This is not a theoretical presentation about responsible AI. It is a direct account of what governance looks like when the stakes are real, the scrutiny is constant, and the humans in the loop must be able to explain every decision to a federal auditor. - Brookings is hosting a webinar on AI and the Future of Teaching and Learning on Monday, June 29th, from 11:00 AM to 12:00 PM. As generative AI rapidly reshapes classrooms around the globe, educators and decisionmakers are grappling with a major concern: How can generative AI be used to help, not harm, teaching and learning? What is the role of technology in the classroom? On June 29th, the Center for Universal Education at Brookings will host a conversation on the ways in which technology, including AI, impacts teaching, learning, and ultimately student development. Led by author and education technology veteran Michael B. Horn, this discussion will explore when AI helps students succeed and where it falls short in the modern digital age. - Bonterra is hosting Aligning Strategy, Engagement, and Impact on Tuesday, June 30th, starting at 1:00 PM. Most companies measure their social impact programs by looking at numbers served, dollars granted or matched, and employee volunteerism hours logged, but those numbers rarely translate into real social or behavioral impact. The challenge isn’t getting the dollars invested or the employees to show up, it’s connecting how those initiatives contribute to business goals and community outcomes. Developing an overall CSR integrated strategy employee engagement that focuses on measuring social impact aligned with business priorities will enable your organization to tell its results story. Join in on this event to learn how to build this integrated framework and transform how your organization connects strategy, employee engagement, and impact. - WorkforceGPS is hosting a webinar on Workforce Pell Implementation: What the Workforce System Needs to Know on Tuesday, June 30th, from 3:00 PM to 4:30 PM. Workforce Pell opens up potential for students to access federal financial aid for programs that have not traditionally been eligible. But it is more than that. Its design requires cross-system implementation efforts that link higher education opportunities to workforce policy, labor market demand, student supports, and outcome accountability. This webinar will provide a strategic and practical overview of Workforce Pell and its implications for the workforce system. The session will explain how Workforce Pell differs from traditional Pell,

Metro Atlanta eXchange for Workforce Solutions

- WorkforceGPS is hosting The AI Advantage: Transforming Education from Classroom to Career on Wednesday, July 1st, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. Artificial Intelligence (AI) is transforming industries at an unprecedented pace, creating new demands for workers and learners equipped with the knowledge and credentials to navigate an AI-driven economy. From elementary school classrooms to university lecture halls, educational institutions are stepping up to meet this challenge - developing AI certifications and credentialing pathways that prepare students at every stage of their academic journey. This webinar will spotlight how forward-thinking institutions are leading the way in AI credentialing for the next generation. Taylor Stockton, DOL's Chief Innovation Officer, will discuss the administration's vision for building a pipeline of AI-ready learners and workers, and how education systems can align with national workforce priorities to meet growing employer demand. Participants will hear directly from education leaders who are pioneering innovative approaches to AI certification - sharing how they are designing curriculum, forging industry partnerships, and removing barriers to access so that all learners can earn meaningful, stackable credentials. Panelists will also discuss challenges they have encountered and strategies for scaling successful programs across different learning environments. Attendees will leave with actionable insights into how AI certifications are being structured, delivered, and recognized in today's labor market, as well as practical ideas for advancing AI credentialing efforts within their own institutions and communities to build a skilled, future-ready workforce. - The National Association of Counties (NACo) is hosting a webinar on Strategies for Sustainable Retiree Health Benefits on Tuesday, July 7th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. The Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) has fundamentally reshaped the Medicare landscape, creating both opportunities and challenges for employers, public sector organizations, and pension funds that sponsor retiree health benefits. While retirees are benefiting from lower prescription drug costs and capped out-of-pocket spending, plan sponsors are now facing significantly higher financial exposure — especially within Medicare Part D. This webinar will explore how the post-IRA environment is changing Group Medicare economics and what plan sponsors can do to protect both retiree outcomes and long-term fiscal sustainability. Attendees will gain insight into emerging cost pressures, including rising healthcare utilization, increased catastrophic drug liability, and evolving CMS reimbursement dynamics. - The National Association of State Workforce Agencies (NASWA) is hosting the NLx Research Hub: Connect 2026 starting Tuesday, July 7th through Wednesday, July 8th, at the Grand Hyatt Washington (1000 H Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20001). NLx Research Hub: Connect 2026 is the second annual in person convening designed to support learning, collaboration, and innovation around the National Labor Exchange (NLx) Research Hub community. The NLx Research Hub is a nationwide source for comprehensive, transparent and actionable labor market data, delivering trusted job posting data, tools, and insights to support informed decisions and drive innovation across the workforce and education system. Connect 2026 brings together state workforce agencies, researchers, digital solution developers and other labor market data stakeholders who use—or want to use—NLx data to inform policy, research, and practice. Connect emphasizes peer learning, hands on engagement, and open dialogue. Participants will see real world examples of how NLx data is being applied, gain insight into current and upcoming NLx Research Hub offerings, and have opportunities to shape future enhancements. Attend to learn, connect, and help advance data driven workforce solutions.
- Brookings is hosting a webinar on Scaling Sustainable Edtech Innovations in South and Southeast Asia on Wednesday, July 8th, from 9:00 AM to 10:15 AM. Learning Education technology, or “edtech,” has seen surging enthusiasm as a means of improving learning outcomes, increasing efficiency, and addressing persistent learning poverty across the globe. Spurred by tech companies’ savvy marketing, governments have increasingly looked to scaling EdTech innovations as a pathway to systemic education transformation. Yet the decisions driving that scaling process are rarely as strategic or evidence-based as they need to be. On July 8th, the Center for Universal Education at Brookings will launch a new report, “From access to impact: Government decision making and scaling of edtech in South and Southeast Asia.” The report finds that across South and Southeast Asia, government decisions about edtech are driven more by political signaling, donor pressure, and short-term feasibility than by evidence or long-term sustainability. The result is edtech ecosystems that are disjointed, insufficiently aligned with learning goals, and at risk of exacerbating the very inequities they aim to address. The event will open with a presentation of the report’s key findings, followed by a conversation on the challenges of scaling innovation to the most marginalized learners and exploring what governments, donors, and tech providers can do differently to better leverage technology for education transformation. - The National Association of Counties (NACo) is hosting Island-Strong Finances: How Kauai County Built Resilience From the Inside Out on Thursday, July 9th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. Hawaii's counties carry a unique weight: the responsibility of serving tight-knit communities while managing the financial pressures that come with island life. For Kauai County, the Garden Island, that responsibility has meant building a financial foundation strong enough to weather uncertainty from the inside out. With a $550 million budget and a community navigating rising housing costs, shifting economic drivers, and the ongoing demands of core public services, every dollar counts. In this session, Kauai County Treasurer Nancee Robles shares how her office partnered with three+one to generate over $20 million for county programs. Join NACo and three+one's Vice President of Client Servicing, Mike Ablowich, alongside Treasurer Robles for a conversation about what it means to protect taxpayer dollars, serve your community with integrity, and what counties across the country can learn from Kauai's approach. - The National League of Cities (NLC) is hosting Creative Processes: Expanding Impact Through Arts and Culture on Thursday, July 9th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. This is the third session of the Health and Wellbeing Capacity Building Series: From Vision to Action. This five-session learning experience is designed to help cities strengthen their ability to advance community wellbeing through clear frameworks, actionable policy tools, meaningful data, sustainable resources, and creative processes grounded in arts and culture to amplify impact. When cities face complex challenges, city staff often rely on familiar solutions and established workflows. Whether a challenge is new or deeply rooted, creative processes grounded in arts and culture can expand how cities approach problem-solving, engage communities more meaningfully, and amplify impact. Participants will learn how artists and cultural practitioners can partner with municipal teams and communities to introduce new ways of seeing, questioning, and working. Whether through creative engagement in community or collaborative problem-solving within city systems, arts-based processes can create space for experimentation, surface new perspectives, and generate innovative strategies that traditional approaches may overlook. - The Aspen Institute is hosting a webinar on The Necessity of Employee-Centered Strategies: A Book Talk with Steve Dawson and Jerry Rubin on Wednesday, July 29th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. We are living through a moment of profound uncertainty about the future of work. Rapid advances in artificial intelligence are raising urgent questions about which jobs will survive, which will be transformed, and which will disappear entirely. Yet amid all the speculation, one thing is already clear: millions of Americans are working jobs that do not pay enough, do not offer stability, and do not provide a real path forward. And businesses — in health care, childcare, hospitality, food service and other large employment sectors — seek to hire even more people into such jobs. In their new book, "Help Wanted: How To Find and Keep Talent in a Forever-Tight Labor Market," authors Steve Dawson and Jerry Rubin argue that demographic realities, including an aging population, slowing growth, and declining workforce participation, mean the competition for workers is structural and long-term, not a temporary blip. Rather than treating workers as a cost to be minimized, they argue that investing in people is now a competitive necessity, and they introduce readers to business leaders who are redesigning jobs, recruiting differently, and partnering with workforce organizations to attract and retain the talent their businesses depend on. Join the Aspen Institute Economic Opportunities Program on Zoom, for a conversation that goes beyond the employer-competitiveness frame to ask harder questions: How can we redesign work to maximize the value of all workers? How can businesses organize and advocate on behalf of their workforces? What barriers keep businesses from changing practice? And what role can policy, philanthropy, and workforce intermediaries play in redesigning work at scale? Click here to learn more and register.

Metro Atlanta eXchange for Workforce Solutions

Reimagining Workforce Development in Central Ohio, host Todd Nielsen, Director of Denver Workforce Services, sits down with Scott Johnson, Director of the Central Ohio Workforce Development Network with Aspyr, to discuss how the Central Ohio Workforce Development Network was built to better connect people to opportunity and help employers meet their workforce needs. Rather than creating another program, the Central Ohio WDN focuses on aligning existing partners—community-based organizations, workforce providers, and public systems—around shared goals, stronger coordination, and a more seamless experience for job seekers. Scott also shares why Aspyr stepped into the role of backbone organization, providing the structure, relationships, and long-term commitment needed to make collaboration work at scale. Listeners will gain practical insights into what it takes to move from a fragmented service delivery model to a more connected, coordinated, and effective workforce system that better serves both job seekers and employers. - The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) is hosting Applicants and AI: How Gen Z's Rewriting the Recruiting Rulebook on Tuesday, September 22nd, from 1:00 PM to 2:00 PM. Nearly 60 percent of students report using AI to prepare for interviews, but few know whether that's considered acceptable. The reality is that both candidates and employers are navigating the same uncertainty: everyone knows AI is here, but no one is quite sure when or how it should be used. As generative AI tools like ChatGPT, Claude, and GitHub Copilot become embedded in everyday learning and communication, Gen Z is redefining what it means to prepare for and participate in recruiting. Drawing on Rewriting the Code's national dataset of more than 3,500 students and early-career professionals, this session will share original findings on how candidates are using AI, and, just as importantly, where misalignment exists between student, recruiter, and institutional expectations. - From The Annie E. Casey Foundation: Emerging adult justice is a reaction to the dismal results for the age group. The latest national data reflect long-term trends. People aged 18 to 25 are over-represented throughout the criminal legal system, have the highest recidivism rates and experience the most extreme racial and ethnic disparities, particularly in correctional facilities. Too often, the justice system fails to recognize the developmental needs of this population and treats emerging adults in almost the same manner as older, fully mature adults. - From The Aspen Institute: The data make clear that the majority of Americans are navigating an economy in which building the wealth they need is structurally out of reach—not for lack of effort, but for lack of the right conditions, tools, and investments working together. The essential wealth metric gives us a sharper way to see that gap and a more precise way to close it for families who need a foundation to weather shocks, seize opportunities, and build something lasting; and for leaders who want their investments to actually move the needle. - From Economic Policy Institute: At its most basic, the joint employer standard simply requires that when multiple employers co-determine or share control over a workers' terms of employment (such as pay, schedules, and job duties), each of those employers is responsible for compliance with worker protection laws. Given the realities of the modern workplace, in which employees often find themselves subject to more than one employer, workers deserve a joint employment standard under the FLSA that guarantees these basic rights and protections. - From the International Association of Workforce Professionals (IAWP): Employers frequently cite uncertainty about candidate quality, lengthy recruitment processes, and concerns about onboarding as barriers to hiring. Workforce organizations can play an important role by helping employers streamline recruitment, expand work-based learning opportunities, develop internship pathways, support job trials, and create stronger connections between employers and talent. In Everett, we did this through our recent Comprehensive Plan and Development Regulations update – led by a shared vision for what the city can become. Our plan invites residents to imagine walkable neighborhoods filled with diverse housing choices, thriving commercial centers linked by transit and communities where every person has a place to call home. - From the National Fund for Workforce Solutions: Inflation is on the rise again, and many families are struggling to make ends meet. Childcare and transportation costs soar while wages stagnate. These pressures are especially acute for workers in low-wage roles, which account for nearly half of U.S. employees. These workers are more likely to be women and people of color, deepening racial and gender inequities in income and wealth. Click here to read more.
- From the National Skills Coalition: Many of the employers that NSC spoke with frankly confessed that they were unfamiliar with some of the technology-related credentials they saw on jobseekers' resumes, and unsure of how those credentials translated into real-world skills. This was true across industries, even among companies that identified themselves as being in the tech sector. In the worst cases, this led to disregarding or minimizing the importance of credentials presented by job seekers. Click here to read more.

- From Prosperity Now: As new pathways for early-wealth building emerge, it is critical that American households have the tools and resources necessary to access these opportunities. This report offers clear, actionable insights that all of us working in the child savings landscape can draw from as we support low-income families in strengthening financial security and resilience for their children. Click here to read more.
- From the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM): To identify jobs facing high automation displacement risk, SHRM researchers estimated the share of employment in any given occupation that meets two conditions: at least 50% of tasks were automated and no nontechnical barriers were present. Using that definition, SHRM estimated that 5.1% of U.S. wage-and-salary employment — or about 7.9 million jobs — faces high automation displacement risk. Click here to read more.
- From the Urban Institute: Together, these findings suggest that cities must reconsider their growth strategies. Investments in housing, education, safety, and child care that are tailored to families' needs can yield both short-term fiscal benefits and long-term economic resilience. The benefits from attracting and retaining families with children can also improve life for lower-income families, childless adults, and elderly people, further boosting a city's economic and fiscal vitality. - From the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: Not long ago, patients with severe obesity faced a stark choice: major surgery or a lifetime of managing a condition that medicine had largely given up on. Today, that has changed. A new generation of anti-obesity medicines — including GLP-1 therapies — are delivering meaningful, lasting weight loss while reducing the risk of heart disease, diabetes, and other life-threatening complications. For the roughly 42% of U.S. adults living with obesity, it's a transformation that touches every community and every workplace. Click here to read more.
- From Workday: With natural language-driven tooling and agent-based patterns, developers are no longer constrained by the old enterprise pace. Teams can go from idea to meaningful prototype much more quickly. That acceleration raises the bar on architecture and design discipline: if more people can build, then patterns, controls, and testing matter even more. Fast is good. Fast and repeatable is where value shows up. Click here to read more.
- From Workforce Monitor: Staffing employment edged up during the week of June 8–14, with the ASA Staffing Index increasing by 0.3% while holding at a rounded value of 89.

Staffing jobs were 5.6% higher compared with the same period last year, up from 5.2% recorded the previous week. New starts, however, decreased during the 24th week of the year, down 6.3% from the prior week. Three in 10 staffing companies (30%) reported gains in new assignments week to week, below the average of 41% so far in 2026. Click here to read more.

- From WorkingNation: There's no single definition of rural America. Some rural communities are a small, but bustling, town center surrounded by vast swatches of farm land. Other communities are mountainous with a few homes and businesses scattered about the region. What they have in common is a population that wants to live and work in a community that offers a slower pace of life, one with financial stability. Providing quality jobs is key to making that happen. It takes a coalition of partners to make it work. While the number of U.S. farms continues a slow decline, and with tech playing an expanding role in all industries, the rural American job market is diversifying. The shift from traditional agricultural jobs towards manufacturing, clean energy, and health care is creating new opportunities that can provide that economic mobility and security. - From WorkRise: State policymakers and program administrators should work with tribal governments to design and communicate state policies to improve access to paid family and medical leave among all AIAN parents. State-level policies should align with tribal values and build upon the work already being done by tribal communities. Tribal governments' participation in Washington PFML could improve paid leave access and reduce inequities within the AIAN population. Click here to read more.

MAX PROVIDER PORTAL

The MAX Provider Portal was launched in 2014 to help local leaders gain a better understanding of metro Atlanta's workforce ecosystem – namely, who is doing what, where, and for whom. The portal provides the most comprehensive picture of our workforce ecosystem. Providers in the portal can share information on the populations and geographies they serve, the services (job search & placement, postemployment services, supportive services, and soft skills training) they provide, the specific occupations and industries they support, and more. The MAX Provider Council oversees and informs the ongoing development of the MAX Provider Portal. Click here to access the MAX Provider Portal. If your organization is not already represented in the MAX Provider Portal, click here to get on the map today.

MAX RESOURCE LIBRARY

The MAX Resource Library is a central clearinghouse for reports, studies, data tools, websites, online portals, and other sources of information related to workforce development to keep workforce partners informed. From data on workforce trends and barriers to the latest on the skills gap and economic mobility, a wealth of information is at your fingertips through this clearinghouse. Resources can be added to the MAX Resource Library through the recommendation of MAX members. The MAX Data Council oversees and informs the ongoing development of the MAX Resource Library.
