- Career Agility System is hosting Quiet Hiring: The Rise of LinkedIn's Hidden Job Market on Thursday, August 20th, from 3:00 PM to 3:30 PM. Are you findable? Most senior roles never get posted. Learn how LinkedIn drives quiet hiring and what makes your profile findable. Most open roles never get posted publicly. Companies fill them quietly, through internal moves, referrals, and recruiters searching LinkedIn directly, before a job ad ever exists. This is quiet hiring, and it's reshaping how senior roles get filled. When positions are filled before they're advertised, the deciding factor isn't your application. It's whether you were visible and findable in the first place. That puts LinkedIn at the center of the process, not as a digital resume, but as the tool recruiters and hiring managers are actively using to find candidates before a posting ever goes live. If your search has stalled and you're not sure why, this session will show you where the real hiring activity is happening and how to position yourself to be found in it. - Career Agility System is hosting Resume Myth-Building: Why Qualified People Get Passed Over on Paper on Thursday, August 27th, from 3:00 PM to 3:30 PM. You've heard the advice. Optimize for the application submission system, the "ATS". Match the keywords. Use the exact phrases from the job description. You've done all of it. And you're still not getting called. Here's what's happening: the system everyone is trying to "beat" has fundamentally changed. Most of the advice circulating online is 3–5 years behind reality. Generative AI has transformed how resumes are screened, and the keyword-stuffing tactics that used to give you an edge are now actively working against you. In this free 30-minute session, certified resume writer, LinkedIn optimization expert, and career coach Jaime

- The Greater Hall Chamber of Commerce is hosting a Finance and Administration Forum on Tuesday, August 11th, from 11:45 AM to 1:00 PM, at Carroll Daniel (330 Main Street, Gainesville, GA 30501). All Businesses look for ways to reduce their tax liability and improve cash flow. Tax credits are one of the most direct ways to do this; however, most businesses don't know what they qualify for or are not aware credits exist. Josh Hollum with TaxCredible, the largest submitter to the State of Georgia for the Retaining Tax Credit, breaks down what's available and why so much goes unclaimed. Drawing on work helping businesses reduce tax liability and free up cash flow through state and federal credits, Josh will discuss what qualifies, what doesn't, and how the dollars you recover can help you fund your next hire, invest in your business, or simply let you breathe easier at tax time. Whether you're actively growing, training your team, or simply want to know what you might be leaving on the table, this session will show you where to look and how to claim those credits. - The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) – Atlanta is hosting a webinar on Personalized Learning Paths for Retention and Succession Readiness on Tuesday, August 11th, from 12:00 PM to 1:00 PM. Your next great leader is already on your payroll, and it's time to develop them before someone else does. In this high-energy session, HR leaders will walk away with three things: a practical framework for building personalized, strengths-based learning paths; the tools to adapt talent development strategies across all four generations in the workplace; and smart, actionable ways to use AI to make it all scalable. Let's get to work. Click here to learn more and register.
- The Georgia Center for Nonprofits is hosting a webinar on Leading Across Differences in a Distributed Workforce on Wednesday, August 12th, from 9:00 AM to 12:30 PM. Today's nonprofit teams are more diverse – and more distributed – than ever before. This session introduces core concepts of inclusive leadership and explores how to lead across generational, cultural, and technological differences in both in-person and remote environments. Participants will reflect on the dynamics shaping the modern workforce and

This course guides participants through the process of designing comprehensive models that link inputs, activities, and outcomes while ensuring programs are effectively monitored and evaluated. You'll develop skills to articulate a project's purpose clearly, align it with measurable goals, and map the steps to meet those goals. Click here to learn more and register.
- The Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta is hosting Place-Based Strategies: Strengthening Local Economics Through Labor Market Policies on Wednesday, August 12th, from 1:30 PM to 3:00 PM. Place plays an important role in the economic outcomes of residents. Place-based strategies have long been used to address employment and mobility barriers in lower-income communities. However, evidence on the effectiveness of such initiatives has been mixed. Researchers in this seminar will examine the impact of workforce development programs, sharing ideas to improve them and offering insights to help inform future policy strategies. - The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) – Atlanta is hosting a Virtual Workshop: Future-Ready, Strategic Problem Solving on Thursday, August 13th, from 12:00 PM to 1:30 PM. Disruption isn't an occasional event anymore; it's the new operating context. Leaders are making decisions amid constant uncertainty, urgent competing priorities, and shifting constraints. Today's disruptive business environment drives a reflex to jump to solutions when challenges arise, often addressing symptoms rather than root causes and leading teams to work hard on the wrong problems. Pragmatic Prospection—the ability to envision a future that does not yet exist and plan for it—is a critical leadership skill for strategic thinking and navigating complexity in this disruptive era. This workshop introduces a practical, two-phase approach to applying prospection to real business challenges. Participants will practice the method, assess their current prospection capabilities, and identify strengths and opportunities. They will leave with a clear, actionable framework to slow down, learn from the past and present, and make more deliberate, future-oriented decisions—enabling stronger strategic planning and more sustainable outcomes. - The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) – Atlanta is hosting a Consultants Network Meetup on Friday, August 14th, from 12:00 PM to 1:00 PM. This month’s virtual meetup will center around branding and enhancing visibility and value. Click here to learn more and register.

- The Georgia Center for Nonprofits is hosting a webinar on Federal Contracts, Grants, and the New Landscape of Risk and Compliance on Tuesday, August 18th, from 10:30 AM to 12:00 PM. If you receive funding from ANY government source, you may not even realize they are federal funds. And if you receive sponsorship or grants from a company or other private sources, you may not be aware that they are managing risks subject to their own compliance obligations. GCN is hosting a focused training to support our valued nonprofit partners in navigating this complex landscape. Click here to learn more and register.
- The Georgia Center for Nonprofits is hosting a webinar on Practical Strategies for Managing Hybrid and Remote Teams on Wednesday, August 19th, from 9:00 AM to 12:30 PM. How do you lead effectively when your team works across time zones, home offices, and shared spaces? This session equips nonprofit managers with tools for navigating hybrid and remote realities. Participants will explore strategies to build trust, foster accountability, and promote equity through communication, team norms, and technology that works for every generation. - The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) – Atlanta is hosting Stop Guessing What Your Health Insurance Renewal Will Cost: New Data from 500+ Companies on Thursday, August 27th, from 12:00 PM to 1:00 PM. For most companies with 25 to 200 employees, health insurance is now a top three expense, and renewals keep arriving with high single digit or double digit increases and little explanation. It does not have to be that way. SHRM surveyed 500+ leaders at small and midsize companies about what they actually paid per employee this year, how hard the increase hit, what it forced them to trade off, and who pushed back versus accepted the first number. This session presents the findings live and benchmarks the room against them in real time, so you will see exactly where your plan sits. You will leave with a practical pre-renewal framework: what data to request from your broker, when to start, which benchmarks matter at your company size, and what the companies that beat their increase did differently. - The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) – Atlanta is hosting The ROI You're Measuring Isn't the One That Matters: Employee Experience, Integrated Care, and What Sustainable Outcomes Actually Require on Thursday, September 3rd, from 12:00 PM to 1:00 PM. Benefits leaders have spent years optimizing for the wrong signal: cost per claim, utilization rates, enrollment numbers — while missing the thing that actually predicts whether a program works: whether employees want to use it. ROI is meaningless if the member experience drives people away, and a fragmented benefits stack, with separate vendors for MSK, weight, mental health, and diabetes, creates an experience of navigating bureaucracy at the exact moment someone is already struggling. Dr. Uppal will make the clinical case for why integrated, multi-condition care closes that gap: treating weight, chronic pain, sleep, and mental health as one connected reality instead of separate enrollment decisions. He'll speak to why sustainable outcomes depend on people actually wanting to stay engaged, not just enrolling once, and why that experience — more than any single cost metric is the real predictor of long-term ROI. Understanding this shift now is how benefits leaders build programs people use, not just programs they buy. Click here to learn more and register.

- The Greater Hall Chamber of Commerce is hosting a Small Business Seminar: Expanding Small Business Capabilities Through Higher Education Partners on Tuesday, September 8th, from 8:15 AM to 9:30 AM, at the Greater Hall Chamber of Commerce (230 E.E. Butler Parkway, Gainesville, GA 30501). Small businesses may fail to scale due to lack of access to resources. Often times, partnering with local technical colleges and universities is not included in discussions when exploring options to scale a business. However, technical colleges and universities are a good resource for small businesses seeking talent, development, and funding support. This session will highlight various ways that small businesses can expand capabilities by partnering with higher education institutions to build a talent pipeline, provide upskilling opportunities for current employees, and to pursue research and grant funding. and community impact. Many cities are responding through new or updated policy tools, including temporary moratoria, zoning changes, development agreements, public engagement processes and large water user protections. This webinar will highlight how local governments are approaching these decisions in practice. The session will examine the local policy choices communities are making, the tradeoffs they are navigating, and the lessons that can inform other cities, towns and villages. - The National Conference of State Legislatures (NCSL) is hosting Do Data Centers Deliver? Lessons Learned from Seasoned Tax Incentive Evaluators on Wednesday, August 11th, starting at 2:00 PM. As data centers continue to dominate headlines, states across the country are weighing the benefits and costs of these energy-hungry facilities. While 38 states currently offer dedicated tax incentives to attract data centers, policymakers and the public have increasingly wondered whether these incentives are worth their costs. In this webinar, seasoned tax incentive evaluators will share insights from their states' assessments of data center tax incentives and discuss how evaluators can approach this hot topic. The webinar is exclusive to NCSL's State Tax Incentive Evaluators Network and will allow plenty of time for candid conversation between evaluators. Click here to learn more and register.
- The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) is hosting 5 Steps for Successfully Leading a Change Effort on Wednesday, August 11th, starting at 2:00 PM. We've all heard the phrase, "The only thing that's consistent is change." And it's true. Organizations are faced with changes regularly – big and small, planned and unplanned. A key success strategy for dealing with change is leadership. Organizations can't view change management as an afterthought – it's a people strategy. Giving employees at every level the tools to manage change helps deliver sustainable results. Click here to learn more and register.

- The National Association of Counties (NACo) is hosting a webinar on Leading Without Blame: How Psychological Safety Strengthens County Cyber Resilience on Tuesday, August 11th, from 3:00 PM to 4:00 PM. The most damaging breaches in county government rarely begin with a sophisticated exploit. They begin with a person, someone who is stressed, overloaded, or afraid to raise a hand. For counties defending elections, courts, emergency services, and water systems, with lean teams and tight budgets, the way leaders build culture and trust is one of the highest-leverage security controls they own. This panel brings county leaders together to explore how psychological safety, authentic leadership, and a culture of belief — not box-checking — drive real cyber resilience. Panelists will share candid, on-the-ground perspectives on moving from performative compliance to operational commitment, treating people as the strongest control rather than the weakest link, and using AI to sharpen human judgment rather than replace it. - The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) is hosting Your Benefits Broker Show Have Answers. Do They? on Wednesday, August 12th, starting at 1:00 PM. Benefits costs are rising. GLP-1 drugs are reshaping pharmacy spend. Pharmacy benefit manager (PBM) contracts are more complicated — and less transparent — than most HR teams realize. And renewal season has a way of arriving before anyone is ready. Most HR leaders rely on their brokers to surface the right information at the right time. But the best broker relationships don't work that way because HR comes to the table with the right questions. In this session, SHRM brings together benefits and insurance experts to walk through the questions every HR leader should be asking their brokers right now. Click here to learn more and register.

- The International Economic Development Council (IEDC) is hosting an IEDC Member Webinar: Mid-Year Federal Policy Update on Wednesday, August 12th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. Major federal policy decisions made in Washington have a significant impact on economic development efforts in communities across the country. Stay ahead of the latest developments with IEDC's mid-year federal policy update, designed to help economic development professionals understand the federal landscape and prepare for what's ahead. This webinar will provide an overview of key legislative and regulatory issues affecting the profession, including the status of the FY 2027 appropriations process, proposed changes to the Office of Management and Budget's Uniform Guidance, the Farm Bill, surface transportation reauthorization, and other emerging federal policy developments. Participants will also receive practical strategies and resources to strengthen relationships with their Members of Congress and position themselves as trusted local experts on economic development issues. Whether you are responsible for advocacy, grant funding, or organizational leadership, this session will equip you with timely insights and practical tools to help your organization navigate federal policy and effectively engage with policymakers. - REMI is hosting Made in America Again: Modeling the Economic Impacts of Manufacturing Reshoring on Wednesday, August 12th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. Reshoring manufacturing to the United States has become a major focus for policymakers, businesses, and economic development leaders in recent years. Shifting production back to the U.S. has the potential to strengthen domestic supply chains and national security, create jobs, increase long-term export capacity, foster technological growth, increase regional output, and support long-term industrial competitiveness. At the same time, reshoring can also affect labor markets, production costs, prices, infrastructure needs, and demand across related industries. In this webinar, REMI will examine the economic impacts of reshoring manufacturing to the United States. Using dynamic economic modeling, we will explore how increased domestic manufacturing activity can influence employment, GDP, output, wages, population, industry growth, and regional competitiveness. The presentation will also consider broader policy questions, including workforce availability, supply chain resilience, capital investment, and the tradeoffs between higher domestic production costs and reduced dependence on overseas suppliers. - The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) is hosting The Power of One: How a Single Database Unlocks Full-Solution Automation on Wednesday, August 12th, starting at 2:00 PM. Spending 45% less time on HR tasks? And 80% less time on compliance work? A Forrester Consulting TEI study found that a composite organization representative of interviewed Paycom clients experienced these results. The secret? A single-database software with full-solution automation built in. In the study, the composite organization achieved a 362% projected ROI by using tech that doesn't rely on multiple, disjointed systems. Yet employers use an average of more than six HCM providers, according to a separate commissioned study conducted by Forrester Consulting on behalf of Paycom. Through HCM software built on one true database, organizations can accelerate access to key reporting data, eliminate inconsistency and simplify life for HR professionals, managers and employees companywide. - The National Association of Counties (NACo) is hosting a webinar on Strategies for Sustainable Retiree Health Benefits on Thursday, August 13th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. The Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) has fundamentally reshaped the Medicare landscape, creating both opportunities and challenges for employers, public sector organizations, and pension funds that sponsor retiree health benefits. While retirees are benefiting from lower prescription drug costs and capped out-of-pocket spending, plan sponsors are now facing significantly higher financial exposure — especially within Medicare Part D. This webinar will explore how the post-IRA environment is changing Group Medicare economics and what plan sponsors can do to protect both retiree outcomes and long-term fiscal sustainability. Attendees will gain insight into emerging cost pressures, including rising healthcare utilization, increased catastrophic drug liability, and evolving CMS reimbursement dynamics. - The Aspen Institute is hosting Metrics that Matter: Improving Financial Analysis of CDFI Small Business Lenders on Wednesday, August 26th, from 10:30 AM to 12:30 PM. CDFI boards, leadership teams, investors, and regulators have long relied on a familiar set of financial metrics to assess organizational performance. While measures such as delinquency, loan loss rates, self-sufficiency, and net asset ratios remain important, they often provide an incomplete picture of how effectively a CDFI small business lender is deploying capital, managing risk, serving its target market, and positioning itself for long-term sustainability. In the present moment, navigating the most effective strategies and solutions is more important than ever. This session will explore an emerging framework developed by the Aspen Institute's Business Ownership Initiative that seeks to move beyond compliance-oriented reporting toward a more integrated view of organizational performance. Participants will examine how decisions related to risk, pricing, capitalization, deployment, and operating costs influence both mission outcomes and financial strength and discuss what metrics may better support real-time decision-making for leadership teams, boards, funders, and investors. - The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) is hosting The Gold Standard: Why Colleges and Employers Should Embrace Registered Apprenticeships on Wednesday, September 9th, from 1:00 PM to 2:00 PM. How do you build a sustainable talent pipeline for high-demand roles and creatively solve your workforce shortage challenge? In 2019, Howard Community College (HCC) and AT&T forged a strategic partnership to solve a critical workforce bottleneck: recruiting, retaining, and clearing skilled cybersecurity talent for massive federal infrastructure contracts. The result was the AT&T Catapult Apprenticeship Program—a nationally recognized Registered Apprenticeship model featured at the White House Cybersecurity Sprint event. This innovative program bridges the gap between traditional college pathways and corporate needs, giving students a direct line to top-secret security clearances and hands-on experience. The numbers speak for themselves: over 450 applicants, over 100 hires, and close to 40 clearances cleared to date. In this co-presented session, leaders from both HCC and AT&T will provide an in-depth view of this registered apprenticeship model. Attendees will get a holistic perspective on how the partnership was established, how it evolved, and how it successfully navigates complex federal requirements. Whether you are a university looking to launch non-traditional work-based learning models or an employer aiming to revolutionize your early talent strategy, you will walk away with the exact blueprints needed to replicate this success in your own region. - The Aspen Institute is hosting Disposable Workers: A Book Talk with MIT Sloan Professor Paul Osterman on Wednesday, September 9th, from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM. For decades, economists and policymakers have debated how to help workers get better jobs. But what if the more fundamental problem is that employers have systematically redesigned work itself to make a third of the workforce expendable? In his forthcoming book, “Disposable Workers: The Transformation of Employment,” MIT Sloan Professor Emeritus Paul Osterman examines this idea and what it would take to reverse it. Osterman documents the rise of contract workers, freelancers, and what he calls “marginal workers” — W-2 employees who are cut off from training, advancement, and any real stake in the organizations they work for. Together, these three groups now make up more than a third of the American workforce. Osterman argues that this trend is neither an accident nor an inevitable byproduct of technological change. It is the result of deliberate choices employers have made about how to structure work and manage labor costs. Osterman traces both the logic behind those choices and their consequences for worker well-being, economic mobility, and the broader social contract. Join the Aspen Institute Economic Opportunities Program on Zoom, for a conversation about what drove this transformation, who bears its costs, and what it would take to reverse it. - The National Association of Workforce Boards (NAWB) is hosting How do They do it? From Silos to Systems: Reimagining Workforce Development in Central Ohio on Thursday, September 10th, from 1:00 PM to 2:00 PM. In Episode VIII: From Silos to Systems: Reimagining Workforce Development in Central Ohio, host Todd Nielsen, Director of Denver Workforce Services, sits down with Scott Johnson, Director of the Central Ohio Workforce Development Network with Aspyr, to discuss how the Central Ohio Workforce Development Network was built to better connect people to opportunity and help employers meet their workforce needs. Rather than creating another program, the Central Ohio WDN focuses on aligning existing partners—community-based organizations, workforce providers, and public systems—around shared goals, stronger coordination, and a more seamless experience for job seekers. Scott also shares why Aspyr stepped into the role of backbone organization, providing the structure, relationships, and long-term commitment needed to make collaboration work at scale. Listeners will gain practical insights into what it takes to move from a fragmented service delivery model to a more connected, coordinated, and effective

- From Accenture: Some companies have burned through a year's AI budget in a single quarter. Most companies manage tokens the same as cloud compute: reactively, when the bill arrives. The companies that pull ahead win on neither better models nor more compute, but by managing token consumption with the same rigor as capital allocation. The mistake is managing AI as a technology expense instead of an economic system. Click here to read more.
- From The Annie E. Casey Foundation: People rely on shared beliefs and assumptions, often without realizing it, to interpret information about topics like poverty and juvenile justice. These narratives influence not only what people believe but also what solutions they support. Data and research are essential, but they are rarely enough on their own to change public thinking. When facts are presented within a clear narrative that explains why they matter and what they mean, they become far more effective at building understanding and support for action. Click here to read more.
- From The Aspen Institute: In recent years, four issues have converged on American education simultaneously. Artificial intelligence, career-connected learning, school choice, and state governance. In the policy world, these tend to be treated as separate tracks, each with its own advocates, its own research base, its own political valence, its own funding stream. AI is a technology issue. Career pathways are a workforce issue. School choice is a governance and civil rights issue. State governance is a structural issue. This compartmentalization is a mistake. These four things are not separate problems. They are four pressures landing on the same worn-out design. Click here to read more.
- From Brookings: Data center construction is exploding amid the artificial intelligence (AI) boom—and so is the community backlash against these projects. Protests across the country and community concerns have prompted legislators to consider moratoriums on data center construction. At least 15 states have weighed pauses on data center development, and at least 100 localities have already approved their own. Click here to read more.
- From Center for American Progress: The rise of cryptocurrency has brought with it new challenges in governance. Decentralized finance (DeFi), in particular, is a technology that seems purpose built to stymie regulation: It allows transactions to be pseudonymous and diffuse; it and its platforms evolve rapidly; it bypasses national borders; and it obscures information about transactions and assets, among other challenges. For these same reasons, DeFi presents massive national security risks, which regulators and law

- From Center on Budget and Policy Priorities: In this report, we use the NHIS to estimate the total number of individuals with disabilities and those receiving SNAP, as it identifies individuals based on reported impairments as a broader measure of disability. In all subsequent figures and numbers based on the NHIS in this report, we adopt an expanded definition of disability. We also use SNAP Quality Control (QC) administrative data to analyze the demographic characteristics and benefit information of people with disabilities receiving SNAP, and to estimate by state the number of people with disabilities receiving SNAP and its benefits. - From Economic Policy Institute: Allowing young teens to work more hours at night opens the door to problems ranging from poor academic outcomes to a greater chance of injury. Studies have consistently shown that intensive work at a young age is associated with poor academic outcomes; longer hours raise the risk of work-related illness and injury; and working later into the night exacerbates sleep deprivation that in turn can interfere with teens' education and well-being. Allowing employers to schedule young teens to work until 9 p.m. also increases the likelihood of nighttime driving for new drivers, an additional risk factor for accidents. - From FedCommunities: Child care interruptions can result in parents leaving work early or missing a full day. Sometimes, those interruptions even affect parents' earnings or their ability to keep a job. We can also look at long-term benefits of quality child care. Since child care serves children during their early, sensitive years of development, it's an opportunity to support the next generation of workers. This is especially true for children who are growing up in disadvantaged situations, like poverty. Click here to read more.
- From the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta: It is widely recognized that demographics can have broad and consequential implications for factors including the neutral rate of interest, potential output growth, and transmission of monetary policy by affecting households' decisions about consumption and savings over their life cycle. As the size and the composition of the age distribution change slowly, demographic projections are readily available and can be used to elicit valuable information about the low-frequency dynamics of key latent variables that guide monetary policy as well as asset valuations and inflation. - From Gallup Workplace Insights: Today, 70% say they are somewhat or extremely knowledgeable about AI, up from 64% in 2024. But instead of becoming more comfortable with the technology, Americans' previously improving attitudes toward AI have lost momentum, according to the latest Bentley University-Gallup Business in Society research. More Americans than in past years believe AI does more harm than good and expect AI to reduce the number of U.S. jobs over the next decade. They are also less likely to trust businesses to use it responsibly. Click here to read more.

- From the International Association of Workforce Professionals (IAWP): For decades, workforce development has focused on helping people prepare for employment. That usually means identifying a career goal, completing training, improving a résumé, preparing for interviews, and finding a job. That work is still essential. But in a labor market shaped by artificial intelligence, automation, changing skill requirements, and less predictable career paths, helping someone find a job is no longer enough. Job seekers also need help learning how to keep learning. Click here to read more.
- From Jobs for the Future: High-quality career pathways are designed to make the journey from school to career more coherent and less dependent on chance. At their best, they are built backward from labor market demand and organized around clear course sequences, meaningful work-based learning, advising, postsecondary options, and credentials that employers value. That structure matters because it helps students see where they are headed and what steps will get them there. Click here to read more.
- From JPMorganChase: JPMorganChase announced the firm intends to deploy over $750 billion through 2035 to increase housing supply and support homeownership in the United States. This marks a nearly 40 percent increase in the firm's housing capital deployment compared to the past decade, and includes financing for 1,000,000 affordable housing units and helping 500,000 homebuyers purchase homes. - From Manpower: If there is one thing that feels fundamentally different about manufacturing today compared with just a few years ago, it is the pace and scale of change. Manufacturers are navigating a convergence of forces unlike anything we have seen in decades. Artificial intelligence is moving from experimentation to implementation. Supply chains continue to be reshaped by geopolitical tensions and regionalization. Energy costs remain volatile. Digital transformation initiatives are accelerating. And the competition for skilled talent has never been more intense. Click here to read more.
- From McKinsey & Company: Increasingly powerful AI models are enabling new applications and creating more economic value, which, in turn, accelerates adoption and drives demand for ever greater computing power. This conforms with the economic principle known as the Jevons paradox, in which tech advances that allow more efficient use of a resource lead to rising consumption of that resource. As computing intensity rises, so do the energy requirements of AI data centers. Overall, their electricity demand is expected to grow considerably through 2030, with AI workloads accounting for about 70 percent of the increase. Click here to read more.

- From the National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE): The rapid evolution of artificial intelligence (AI) is reshaping the landscape of higher education, not only in how the institutions teach and assess learning, but also in how they prepare students for an increasingly uncertain and dynamic employment landscape. AI has transformed the workforce by automating repetitive tasks, eliminating some roles entirely, and generating entirely new types of jobs. At the same time, employers are reevaluating employability, which entails the ability to obtain and maintain a job. Click here to read more.
- From the National Association of Counties (NACO): On July 17, the U.S. Senate Environment and Natural Resources Committee advanced the Small County PILT Parity Act (S. 1175). This measure would amend the Payments in Lieu of Taxes (PILT) formula to provide fairer program funding to counties with populations smaller than 5,000. The legislation would bring needed fairness to the PILT formula and support rural counties tasked with providing government services on and around federal land to residents and visitors alike. Click here to read more.
- From the National Association of Workforce Boards (NAWB): One of the most persistent challenges is how disconnected the workforce system can feel. There is often limited clarity around how employers, education providers, and workforce organizations should work together, what role each plays, what resources are needed to support effective implementation, and too little agreement on a needed common language to describe this work and related outcomes. These challenges were also evident in discussions about apprenticeships. While multiple approaches are designed to support talent development, many employers choose to create their own programs rather than pursue formal registration. Click here to read more.
- From the National Conference of State Legislatures: States are tightening requirements for new data center projects. Some jurisdictions now require developers to demonstrate adequate water supplies and supporting infrastructure before permits are approved, while others are reevaluating tax incentives to ensure they include water-conservation measures and community-impact considerations. In some areas, water availability is becoming as important as power access in determining where facilities are built. Click here to read more.
- From the National League of Cities (NLC): Many firefighters, along with other public safety personnel, experience high levels of stress due to exposure to traumatic events on the jobs, and continued exposure to high-stress situations may harm mental health and overall wellbeing. While fire departments respond to behavioral health crises and other complex community needs, local governments are exploring co-responder programs, which pair first responders with behavioral health or human services professionals. These programs may improve response outcomes for residents, reduce strain on emergency response systems and support the well-being of firefighters and other public safety personnel. - From the National Fund for Workforce Solutions: In June, our nation's labor force participation rate — the portion of working-age adults who are employed or actively looking for work — fell to its lowest point in 50 years, excluding the COVID pandemic years. This isn't due solely to retirements or a declining immigrant population. Many workers are opting out of the labor market and it spells trouble for families, businesses, and communities. Click here to read more.

- From the National Skills Coalition: National Skills Coalition's observation of the Workplace Literacy program confirmed that there was an appetite among individual employers and among training providers to reach a population of English learners in the workforce who may never previously have qualified for incumbent worker training. The program also affirmed the urgent importance of digital skill-building for many of these workers and the businesses that employ them. Click here to read more.
- From Prosperity Now: Every organization pays close attention to how it is evaluated. Banks are no different. What gets measured gets managed, and activities that receive less emphasis can gradually receive fewer resources, less executive attention, and lower strategic priority. Modernization and accountability can advance together. Regulatory requirements should be clear, workable, and proportionate to a bank's size and business model while maintaining meaningful incentives for locally responsive lending, attainable homeownership, small-business financing, responsible financial products, and effective nonprofit partnerships. - From the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM): Based on this report, HR leaders should recognize that opening the gates to learning opportunities isn't enough to spur engagement. Instead, they must build an environment of strong teams. In doing so, employees feel engaged in their work and connected to one another — and their managers. In turn, this supports further development through learning opportunities. Click here to read more.
- From the Urban Institute: Rising property insurance premiums are quietly becoming one of the biggest threats to housing affordability in the United States. Evidence shows that current premiums are outpacing what household incomes can absorb, leaving more

- From the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: Despite ongoing debates around AI regulation, AI in Healthcare: A Cross-Agency Roundtable—a closed-door convening that brought together more than fifty leaders from government, healthcare, and industry under Chatham House rules—found substantial common ground across government and industry. Participants in a group of more than 50 health leaders repeatedly returned to three shared priorities: stronger public-private coordination, greater clarity, and building trust in AI-enabled healthcare. - From Workforce Monitor: Staffing employment edged up during the week of July 13–19, with the ASA Staffing Index increasing by 0.6% to a rounded value of 90. Staffing jobs were 3.7% higher compared with the same period last year, down from 4.6% recorded the previous week. New starts also increased during the 29th week of the year, up 3.2% from the prior week. Close to half of all staffing companies (46%) reported gains in new assignments week to week, slightly above the average of 41% so far in 2026. Click here to read more.
- From WorkingNation: There's no single definition of rural America. Some rural communities are a small, but bustling, town center surrounded by vast swatches of farm land. Other communities are mountainous with a few homes and businesses scattered about the region. What they have in common is a population that wants to live and work in a community that offers a slower pace of life, one with financial stability. Providing quality jobs is key to making that happen. It takes a coalition of partners to make it work. While the number of U.S. farms continues a slow decline, and with tech playing an expanding role in all industries, the rural American job market is diversifying. The shift from traditional agricultural jobs towards manufacturing, clean energy, and health care is creating new opportunities that can provide that economic mobility and security.
